

Not using OPSEC is like leaving your safe open,

Never provide sensitive information over the phone if you do not know the caller.

Shred sensitive information when no longer needed.

Do not leave critical information laying around the office when unattended.

Limit the amount of personally identifiable information you post on social networking sites.

Do not discuss critical information in public spaces where it can be overheard.

Always establish a need-to-know when discussing critical information.

It gives the adversary a better chance to get your information.